Care at Christmas

Bringing the Christmas spirit into care homes is a wonderful way to engage residents and get everyone together for a shared celebration.

With 40 years' experience supporting care customers, we understand the challenges of care catering and the range of special diets and accessibility issues that need to be addressed.

Enjoying good food in good company is especially important at Christmas and with our adaptable nutritionally-balanced menus no-one needs to miss out on the festive fun! From texture modification to hand held foods and adapted cutlery and more, we've got all your residents covered.

IDDSI Level 4 Texture-Modified

Dysphagia, the general term for a range of issues around difficulties with swallowing, is very common in older residents, especially stroke survivors and dementia patients, but can affect residents of any age.

Following an assessment from a speech and language therapist, residents with swallowing problems may be placed on a modified texture diet and/or thickened fluids to ensure they can eat and drink as safely as possible.

Our IDDSI Level 4 Christmas dinner video shows how to create a texture-modified version of a traditional Christmas meal enabling all residents to join the table and dine with dignity whatever their needs.

Food and drink should be texture-modified using the IDDSI framework. This has seven levels, with drinks measured from Levels 0-4, and foods from Levels 3-7.

CHEESE

Did you know?

Chutneys originated in India nearly 1,500 years ago and the name chutney is derived from the Hindi word 'chatni', meaning to crush or grind.

Traditionally made by grinding together fruits, veg, spices and salt using a mortar and pestle, it was used to preserve the fruit and vegetables.

We stock over 50 chutneys, relishes, pickles and more, some of which can be seen below. Alternatively scan this QR code for more online...

Rich & Buttery Croissant Loaf

Did you know?

The croissant is as French as Paris, Versailles and the Louvre, right? Uh-uh! (incorrect klaxon sound plays!). They originated in Austria and Hungary - viennoiserie literally means 'things from Vienna'. Austrian bakers made the treat to celebrate after they 'helped save the city' in the siege of Vienna in 1683 by alerting the authorities about strange underground noises.*

Did yuzu know?

The traycake (featured right) combines Blackberry and Yuzu – a highly aromatic, tart citrus fruit originating from East Asia, described as a hybrid of a mandarin-orange and an ichang papeda. Yuzu has an intense, complex flavour—blending lemon, grapefruit, and mandarin notes—and is a staple ingredient in Japanese, Korean, and Chinese cuisine. It is part of our traycakes range featured here, but we have many more, along with traybakes and individual slices, available online.

Did you know?

In Italy, antipasti refers to food that is served before a meal. The literal meaning has Latin roots ante ('before') and pastus ('food'). The antipasti course traditionally comes first at Italian restaurants, dinner parties or other special occasions - much like starters in the UK, appetisers in America, or hors d'oeuvres in France. The antipasti course is intended to whet the appetite for the courses to come, so typically the Italian approach focuses on quality over quantity.*
